SHE SAYS: This was a big change for us, because we never incorporate toys into our sex life. Mid-act, my boyfriend grabbed the vibrator, and it was cute to watch him fumble with the on-off switch like a kid on Christmas morning. After it got buzzing, I was ready in seconds, and it wasn't long before I reached orgasm. After coming, though, sex felt really weird to me—I was supersensitive and kind of numb. I would definitely use this again, but I wouldn't want to include it every time, because I'd worry that it might take the fun out of good old-fashioned sex.

HE SAYS: Using the vibrator was a well-deserved break for me. Most important, my girlfriend seemed to really like it. I'll keep it handy in the future in case I want to mix things up or need a little mid-sex rest!

SHE SAYS: My husband and I were psyched to try the vibrator, so we set the TiVo for our favorite show and hit the sheets early. He started by touching it against my nipples and my belly. It was exciting, but the real fun was during sex. He was on top, sitting up, and I was on my back, holding the vibrator against my clitoris. It. Felt. So. Good. The fact that I could be stimulated in two places simultaneously was completely delicious—my orgasm was insane. This was like our regular sex life plus batteries. We've been using this ever since trying it out, and now I feel spoiled! My one piece of advice? Avoid numbness by starting on a slow speed and then building up.

HE SAYS: The vibrator worked best when my wife was directing its pressure and placement. Not only did the vibrator seem to enhance her pleasure, but the stimulation was fun for me too!
